Ruling Danes Agree on Tie With Liberals

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 29 (AP) — The ruling Social Democrats and the opposition Liberals agreed yesterday after three months of talks to form a new government together — the first coalition combining Socialists and non-Socialists.

The announcement was made by Premier Anker Jorgensen and Henning Christophersen, chief negotiator for the Liberals. For the last 50 years, Social Democrats and Liberals have been the major adversaries in Danish politics. When Mr. Jorensen invited the Liberals to the negotiations few politicians or observers took it seriously.

"In the present economic situation it is beyond any doubt that this is the right thing to do." Mr. Jorgensen said.

Total of 88 Seats

Between them, the coalition partners will command 86 seats in the 179-seat Folketing - the Danish parliament - and adding two representatives elected in the Faro Islands and Greenland, the total will be 88. It will still be two votes short of an absolute majority but will be strong enough to make it vir-tually impossible for the other nine parties to mobilize a majority against the new government.

Mr. Jorgensen, 57, will continue as premier because his party, with 65 seats, is by far the largest. The Liberals are expected to get such key offices as the Foreign Ministry and possibly the Ministry of Finance.

Mr. Jorgensen said that no timetable for the nomination of the government and the presentation of the new cabinet was set. He said it would probably be this week and that the new government may introduce crisis legislation in a special ses-sion of the Folketing, which is in summer recess.

porting the deficit — the 26th in a row — said today that it was the largest since the $4.52-billion shortfall in February.

The Treasury and the White House Council of Economic advisers, in a joint statement, asserted that while government officials are disappointed over the deficit it is expected that the trade gap will resume its decline in the coming months as a result of exphange rate. months as a result of exchange-rate adjustments and their effect on demand for foreign products.

The communique also noted that the "moderation in the rise of consumer prices was very heartening." The Commerce Department said that exports fell 2.7 percent to $11.79 billion in July compared with a 3.2-percent rise in June to $12.13 billion, while imports rose 7.7 percent to $14.78 billion after felling 1.9 percent in June 26 $13.72 falling 1.9 percent in June to $13.72

Imports of petroleum and related products fell 4.5 percent to an adjusted $3.14 billion after declining percent in June to $3.29 billion. However, increases were registered in imports of machinery and transport equipment, manufactured goods, food, live animals and inedible crude materials. Anto Imports Up

The department said that imports of passenger cars from countries other than Canada increased as did imports of telephone and telegraph equipment, television sets, iron and steel plates and sheets and iron-ore steel tubes, pipes and fittings. Six of 10 major export categories decreased, including inedible crude materials, except fuels, food and live animals, mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials and manufactured goods.

Other exported commodities that decreased included iron and steel, paper and paperboard, nonferrous metals, passenger cars and electrical machinery.

The main causes in the lengthening deficit, the department said, were automobiles imported from Japan and Europe, which rose by $206 million after falling $38.8 mil-

Oil imports totaled $3.14 billion, a decline from June's $3.3 billion. Analysts said that the drop stemmed from the fact that U.S. oil companies were using up invento-ries accumulated last year. Now, they say, the companies are pre-pared to rebuild those inventories, thus increasing oil shipments once The Labor Department said that inflation eased as consumer prices, particularly for food and clothing turned in the best performance of 1978. The seasonally adjusted in-dex rose 0.5 percent in July, following increases of 0.9 percent in each of the three preceding months.

The index for food and beverages was unchanged following six months of sharp increases. These prices rose 1.3 percent in June, 1.5 percent in May, and were up 1.8 percent in April.

The index for food at home, which includes purchases from gro-cery stores, declined 0.4 percent after an average monthly increase of 1.6 percent in the first half of this year. The department attributed the decline primarily to lower meat prices. Beef prices declined 2.2 percent after rapid rises during the last eight months. Pork prices fell 4 percent following a 0.6-percent drop in WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 (NYT) — The State Department will play "an active role" in pressing for United Nations consideration of human-rights violations in Cambodia, a State Department spokesman said yesterday.

Plebiscite Urged For Puerto Rico

BOSTON, Aug. 29 (AP) — The National Governors Association adopted a resolution today endors-ing "self-determination" by the people of Puerto Rico to choose statehood, commonwealth status or independence. The island has had commonwealth status since 1952.

"It is essential that the American citizens of Puerto Rico decide for themselves their political status," said the policy statement introduced by Gov. Carlos Romero of Puerto Rico. He said he expected that a plebiscite, planned for the early 1980s, would decide in favor of statehood.

Russians Seem Unable To Counter Hua's Tour

MOSCOW (NYT) — As the visit of Chinese leader Hua Kuo-feng to or Chinese leader Hua Kuo-teng to Eastern Europe draws to a close, it is clear that the Soviet Union has been irritated and deeply worried by China's re-emergence in the international arena. The Russians, however, seem at a loss over what to do about it.

Mr. Hua began his visit in Romania. a Warsaw Pact ally of the Soviet Union, on Aug. 16 and visited neighboring Yugoslavia, which is nonaligned, before leaving for Iran. In both countries, he referred pointedly to the threat of "hegemonism" — Peking's unmis-takable code word for Soviet power - and the Soviet press has reacted with angry attacks.

Vietnamese officials made clear that they no longer demand $3 billion in war reparations as a condition for diplomatic relations, the delegation reported on arrival at Andrews Air Force Base.

The Carter administration has sidestepped the issue of relations with Vietnam for the last few months, saying that Vietnam had not officially notified the United States of any new position. The congressional delegation said their trip has changed that.

U.S. Judge Says N.Y. Times Still Is In Contempt

HACKENSACK, N.J., Aug. 29 (NYT) — Citing the continuing re-fusal of The New York Times to compel a jailed reporter. Myron Farber, to turn over his notes in the murder trial of Dr. Mario Jascalevich. Superior Court Judge Theodore Trautwein ruled yesterday that the newspaper had not yet purged itself of contempt.
In a biting oral opinion that took him half an hour to read, the judge accused The Times of "sanitzing" its files to avoid submitting papers in response to a subpoena and ordered it to continue paying fines of $5,000 a day until it shows "good faith as America's premier newspa-per" by putting pressure on Mr. Farber.

Judge Trautwein dismissed as "worthless" 25 documents the newspaper had submitted to the trial judge and said, "It defies reason. sense and probability that the newspaper would have the effrontery to turn over this useless material and say 'we have complied.' Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, publish-

Izvestia, the official Soviet government paper, did suggest a kind of counter demand last week — a treaty of peace and friendship between Japan and the Soviet Union.

The Soviet blustering over the Chinese reminded some observers here of the angry words out of Washington last spring over alleged Soviet and Cuban "adventurism in Africa. It seemed obvious to the Soviet Union then that the threats would never be backed by deeds.

There is, however, little doubt here that if China's appeals to Japan and to the West for help in modernizing its economy and armed forces are answered, the Kremlin will find some way to react. The ultimate decision probably depends on what course the United States takes. If the Carter administration sells the Chinese the technology and hardware it has lately been denying the Soviet Un-ion for political reasons, Soviet inion for political reasons, Soviet insiders say privately that this would force the Kremlin to make an agonozing reappraisal of relations with Washington.

Part of the reason for raising the threat is, clearly, to dissuade the Carter administration from playing the "China and "And with the no-

the "China card." And with the po-litical climate with the United States now at a low point and with the centerpiece of U.S.-Soviet detente - a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty — still facing a diffi-cult negotiation and ratification process, the threat is probably not entirely empty.

A Soviet commentator with close ties to the leadership recently suggested, in private, that arms sales to the Chinese by the United States or its NATO allies would in effect subvert a strategic arms treaty. A western opening to China could, in the worst possible case, mean the end of Soviet detente policies.

But that point has not been reached yet. For the present, the Soviet leaders are pointing out to the rest of the world — and to their own allies — that the Chinese are preaching the inevitability of war and that the danger from Peking has been vastly underestimated. They also seem to be afraid nobody is listening.

visit "in global terms really has a tremendous, it could be said historic significance." It was the first visit to Europe by a Chinese Communist Party chairman since 1957, when Mao Tse-rung visited Moscow be-fore the break between the Soviet and Chinese parties.

Last week, Sen. President Carter has criticized this type of reactor as dangerous but, according to Sen. "Then I got itchy feet and went to Boston to work for Mr. Hearst, God help us," he said. "I found out that the level of newspaper work in Cleveland was above the level in Boston. I hated this business of nagging some poor family for pic-tures of the victim."

Mr. Catton was an early member and served a term as president of the Cleveland Guild in the mid-1930s. By this time he was a mainstay of the Newspaper Enterprise Association, the Scripps-Howard feature service.

"I wrote canned editorials," he said. "I couldn't send anything any one client would object to. Sometimes I let go, and one publisher wrote in, 'If you keep on like this, we're going to have to read these before we print them.' I haven't read an editorial since.

"I then got to editing this stupid Sunday magazine, a daily editorial column and a book review. If I was too critical, the editor would say: 'If the book is that bad, why review it? Unless I followed the orthodox Republican line, I caught hell. And that was not my line."

The orthodox line then was isolationist, and Mr. Catton, who had transferred to Washington, was increasingly convinced that the United States would have to enter the war in Europe. So in early 1942, he joined the War Production Board as information officer.

As Mr. Catton saw it, the war on the industrial front was a struggle between the country's military and postwar needs on the one hand, and selfish corporate or bureaucratic interests on the other. On

"I got to thinking that I would write a book about the Civil War. I'd been reading these regimental histories since about 1930, and it grew on me that it wasn't the generals who held the ridge, it was the soldiers . .

"I was not a historian or a military expert, so I figured I'd write a novel. I got about a hundred pages done when I realized that it was perfectly awful - except when it was about real people — so I threw it in the wastebasker. Newspaper work is not good training for novelists, but it's very good training for

Mr. Catton then began his great trilogy on the Army of the Poto-mac. The first volume, "Mr. Lincoln's Army," was rejected by several publishers. "I kept heaving" that Civil War books don't sell. Mr. Catton said.

Finally, George Braziller per-suaded Doubleday to publish it, in 1951. It sold fewer than 2,000 copies. The second volume, "Glory Road," did scarcely better. The third, "A Stillness at Appomattox, was also moving very slowly in the winter of 1953-54 when an enthusiast brought it to the attention of the Pulitzer Prize award committee.

It had not been nominated, but it received the prize in history, and became an overnight best-seller. The National Book Award fol-lowed, and something like a renaissance in Civil War studies took

Before then, writing about the war had been dominated by Southnostalgia, what Mr. Catton called "the Lost Cause legend. Lee on his white horse and all that." While he wrote of Southern troops with compassion, he held that their leaders "were looking for trouble and they found it."

To the frequent assertion that the war was not about freeing the slaves, Mr. Catton retorted: "That was ALL that the war was about. Many people didn't see it that way, but it was the only possible Mr. Catton saw the civil-rights struggle of this mid-century as a continuation of the process, and frequently said so. He resigned from Washington's Cosmos Club in 1962 after it had barred a black.

While serving as editor of American Heritage, from 1954 to 1959, and as a senior editor thereafter, he produced 10 more books on the Civil War, ending with "Grant Takes Command," in 1969. All were received with high praise. Orville Prescott wrote in The

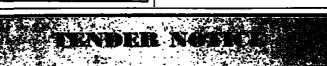

New York Times that Mr. Catton "writes about the battles and leaders of the Civil War as if no one had ever written about them before." The historian was elected to the National Institute of Arts and Letters in 1963 and received the Medal of Freedom from President Ford in 1976.

Mr. Catton was chosen to write the first volume of a Bicentennial project covering the histories of all 50 states and the District of Columbia. His subject was, of course, his native Michigan. The book appeared in 1976.

Thieves, Too, Enjoying Summer on the Riviera

CANNES, France, Aug. 29 (AP) - Summer on the French Riviera: yachts, sun, jet-setters, and, like flies around honey, a swarm of thieves. Their latest haul — a fortune in jewels from the widow of American railroad and telegraph heir Frank Jay Gould.

There have been at least a dozen major jewel robberies on the Riviera this summer, and police estimate the booty at about $2.7 million.

Florence Gould, 83, was having morning tea with friends elsewhere in Cannes when the burglars arrived at her home. Yesterday she was not receiving callers and was reported resting after the shock. Police say they know little more about the robbery than that it was a precision job by brazen profes-sionals and that the haul was so big it will take a week to inventory it. Armed and masked, the three thieves entered Mrs. Gould's 42room villa, El Patio, through a skylight Sunday, tied a maid to a chair and spent the next 30 minutes coolly cleaning out Mrs. Gould's

Despite the new premier's show of modesty, he does not like the adjective "caretaker" applied to his government. Low-key as he seems, he still acts like a manager about to take charge. As an example he cited the control that the Socialists and the Center Democrats, partners in the last coalition, have over the government-owned newspapers. In the shorthand of Portuguese politics, Mr. Nobre da Costa is known as a technocrat leading a government of technocrats while the politicians sort out their conflicts on the sidelines. But the technocrat label disturbs him.

There is one obvious danger to Portuguese democracy in Mr. Nobre da Costa's government. If it succeeds too well, the Portuguese people might turn their backs on political parties.

Now at the Marignan and the St. Germain Huchette (in English), "An Unmarried Woman" is an informative portrait of the contemporary American woman to Gallic eyes. Although framed as a brisk comedy, it has sociological implications in its presentation of a desert-ed wife's reaction to her broken marriage and in her adjustment to her husbandless situation. Theater in New York

The Young Sherlock Holmes

By Barbara Crosette

NEW YORK (NYT) — A new play about Sherlock Holmes will open soon on Broadway, and everything about it - from who wrote it to whodunit - is going to be a surprise.

The Crucifer of Blood," now in rehearsal at the Helen Hayes Theater, is the first play written by a musician-actor-director named Paul Giovanni. It was first performed last winter at the Studio Arena Theater in Bullalo, N.Y., and it so impressed the Broadway producer Lester Osterman -- who arrived in a blizzard to see it and found the house full - that he decided not only to back it, but also to put it in his own theater where it will open Sept. 28 after previews starting Sept. 14.

Giovanni got his inspiration for Doyle story "The Sign of Four."
"But the story didn't really have a mystery in it," Giovanni said during a rebearsal break at the theater.
"There were only a couple of things - the paper, a chest of jewels . . . So in the end all I used of Conan Doyle were the names of Holmes and Watson. What I've done is given the Holmes story an Agatha Christie twist without in any way disrupting or being unfaithful to his world."

The Holmes and Watson of Giovanni's play are young men. "It is 1887, and they are Victorian." Giovanni said, "It's an experiment to show them at 33—five years out of Cambridge, with all the great cases to come. No one has ever seen them in the right clothes. They will wear frock coats and stovepipe hats. People are used to seeing them as older men — usually fressed in a vaguely Edwardian-to-920s style, Giovanni has moved his characers out of the drawing room and to location" — in this case no less han five sets done by the noted designer John Wulp (who is also among the producers of the play).

"In Buffalo they offered me the Royal Shakespeare Company

Royal Shakespeare Company 'Sherlock Holmes,' Giovanni said. (That production, starring John Wood, was seen on Broadway four years ago.) "But that play — like all the other Holmes plays we looked at — was not a proper mystery. I said to them, 'Why don't I write one?' And that's what I did." The Buffalo.

Paxton Whitehead, the former Royal Shakespeare Company actor who has more recently been artistic director of the Shaw Festival at Niagara-on-the-Lake in Ontario, created the part of Holmes in Buffalo. He will play the lead in the Broadway production, supported by Timothy Landfield as Dr. Watson and Glenn Close as Irene St. Clair, the woman who brings the bizarre clues of the case to Baker Street. Giovanni has defied Victorian tradition by making the woman a strong character. In his view Women were the most oppressed class in the 19th century."

"The Crucifer of Blood" centers on two former officers in the British Army in India during the Mutiny of 1875 who have made a pact with a third British soldier over the sharing of a chest of jewels. The pact is broken, and 30 years later it appears that primitive revenge has een taken on the two officers. The plot is complete with savages and poison darts and an orphaned and penniless young woman of gentle upbringing with whom Watson falls in love. Paul Giovanni, 37, was born and raised in Atlantic City, N.J. He was a premedical student at St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia, but went on to the Catholic University in Washington, D.C., on a scholarship to get a master's degree in drama. He was a songwriter and member of a rock group called Side Show before beginning an acting career in regional theaters and Off-Broadway houses. Most recently he has been a director; of "Equus" at the Coconut Grove Playhouse in Miami as well as at the Studio Arena in Buffalo, and of "Black Comedy-White Lies" at the Shaw Theatre in Logdon. Giovanni drew on his rock music background for special effects. finding Broadway a mite conventi-onal for his tastes. "Lightning." he said, "is usually done here by flickering lights. I went to the guys who do the stage effects for rock groups play took only three months to complete and most of the finishing touches were put on in rehearsals in The play opens with a gateway to a palace-turned-British-fort in India. The second scene shifts to 221-B Baker Street in London. A seedy home in suburban London, an opium den in Limehouse and the Thames follow -- complete with a boat chase.

The Research

The writing of the play meant a lot of research for Giovanni, who says he worked "18-hour days" to get the play in shape. "The only interest I had had in Sherlock Holmes in the past was from old Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce movies." Reading of Conan Doyle led him to an appreciation more of what Doyle unconsciously wrought than on what he wrote.

"Doyle was a terrible snob, "Giovanni said, "What he really wanted to be was a serious novelist. He wasn't interested in the devlopment of character in his series of Holmes cases that he wrote for The Strand magazine. I don't think he knew what he was doing: He was creating a myth that is staggering. There are only three names from English literature that people all over the world recognize — Robinson Crusoe, Hamlet and Sherlock Holmes. And the whole idea of London fog comes from Doyle.

"I did a lot of work on India. Is is so exotic that you kind of fall in love with it. But India was my hardest research - and it was hardest of all to write Indians in the Giovanni also researched the use of drugs among Victorians — Conan Doyle used cocaine, and Holmes takes it in the play. "Opi-um dens existed in London." Giovanni said, "but Doyle was the first to have the courage to write about them. The British were heavily involved in opium trade with China, and the British who served in India used opium there regularly. When they returned to England, there was a terrible craving for opium. So opium dens were opened in warehouses along the Thames Usually a Chinese or someone else ran them.

What next for Giovanni? "The directorial concept is what this play is all about," he said, "I would nevlike The Kiss. No one had ever asked them to work on Broadway, and they were very eager to do it."

Then there is the Wulp scenery.

Shock Treatment

The political divisions in Iran were bitter enough to incinerate at least 377 civilians in a movie theater; and they are reflected in the appointment of a new prime minister, Jaafar Sharif-Emami, by the shah.

And the new head of government has made at least verbal concessions to one of the contending forces in the shah's realm by a reaffirmation of the nation's adherence to the Moslem faith. For the right wing in Iran is distinctive less for its political aspirations than for its demands for a return to a conservative form of Moslem theology and prac-

There is a left wing in Iran, of course. It opposes the shah's government (in which he is the most important factor) and on the positive side probably ranges from outright Communism to the kind of nationalistic leftism represented by the late Mohammed Mossadegh.

Iran is important because of its oil; it is also a significant strategic point, ringed by the Soviet Union, Afghanistan, Pakistan and Iraq — uneasy neighbors, each of which has aspirations and uncertainties that impinge upon the life of the heart of the old Persian Empire. It was Iran that provided one of the first open and dangerous splits between East and West after World War II, when the Soviet Union set up Communist regimes in some of the northern areas of the country, and refused to pull out troops that had been sent there (along with British forces) during the war. And Mossadegh's anti-foreign oil policies touched off another crisis in the 1950s. which the shah. Reza Pahlavi, countered with a long period of martial law.

Those who want to move faster in this direction, or to have a freer electorate, demonstrate at home and abroad, and have won some recent concessions. But what has been most in evidence within Iran has been the objections of the hardline Moslems to the laicization of life in this almost wholly Moslem country. In other words, the shah, like his father, has worked in the same direction that Kemal Ataturk took in Turkey, seeking to break (or at least loosen) some of the religious bonds that had held for centu-

This is a common problem in Moslem countries, which can be as tautly held, religiously, as Saudi Arabia and Libya, while the politics and foreign relations differ as greatly as they do in those two states. Ataturk probably made the most sweeping changes (Tur-key, after all, had combined the Ottoman Empire and the Islamic Caliphate), including one that allowed women to vote. But Reza Pahlavi has moved on the same road, while promoting a highly modernized industrial development, and it is clear that the religious issue is a powerful one in his land.

The notion that today's world has, for all practical purposes, abandoned the practices ordained by its religions is clearly, at the the very least, premature. From Ireland to Lebanon, from Rome to Tehran, much of what men and women do is governed by their be-liefs in powers beyond those of this earth. FARNHAM, England — A famous old inn, located about 90 minutes' drive west of London, used to be called The Jolly Farmer. Now it is named The William Cobbett, after the angry and vitupera-tive journalist born here in 1763.

I have been collecting Cobbett's works for years. One of journalism's first investigative commentators, his unpopular eruptions in print made him the only man to be chased first out of England and then out of America for printing what he saw to be the truth.

He began as a soldier in the service of George III, but after charging his officers with corruption in regimental accounts, Cobbett was forced to flee to France and then to America. In the United States, taking the prickly name of Peter Porcupine, he proceeded to infuriate most of his new neighbors by extolling the virtues of England, lacerating the Founding Fathers, and even resuming to disagree with Noah Webster about English grammar. When a Philadelphia judge fined Cobbett $5,000 for libel (then an enormous sum) it broke Porcupine's Gazette, driving its editor back to England and to a warm welcome from the Tory govern-

Short Romance

That romance did not last long. By 1804, Cobbett's new paper, the Political Register, turned England's establishment and became the foremost radicalist, reformist organ of opinion. Essayist William Hazlitt coined the term 'fourth estate" to describe Cobbett's influence, and soon the Tories had had enough of him: A libel conviction put the grammarian-farmer-editor in Newgate Prison for two years. After serving his sentence, Cob-bett continued his attacks, but when the government threatened to jail him again, he hurried back to America and pioneered in the study of agriculture. When the coast was clear, he returned to England and ultimately wrote "Rural Rides," a masterpiece of local reporting-byhorseback that warned about the changes that industrialization would make in his nation's charac-

The government tried to jail him again, this time for sedition. But Cobbett had a following that the judges could not safely ignore. Instead of being put in prison he was elected to parliament, where he put some of his reformist ideas into

Following the path of Cobbett's rural rides to Surrey to the tavern in Farnham, a visitor is struck by the similarity of the harassment, then and now, of the press by the state. Particularly by the judges. No longer are libel and sedition the means by which judges nibble away at the very first protection against tyranny demanded by the men who signed the U.S. Constitution. Under the banner of a fair trial the law is putting itself above the Tension has traditionally existed between "free press" and "fair - rights that sometimes clash. When one "good" comes into conflict with another, it is bad for one to triumph and the other to be crushed; when two "rights" are per-mitted to fight to the finish, the result is wrong. Recently, judges in Washington decided it serves justice best for police officers to have the right to rummage through newsmen's pri-vate notes. In New Jersey, a judge has decided it serves justice best for a defendant to be able to try to force a reporter to reveal his confidential sources. The court system has forced the issue and "won;" so far, press freedom has "lost."

The conclusion was determined as soon as the issue was joined: If the shoe were on the other foot, with the press deciding the decision would have been just as abso-

The reason the judges can get away with repealing the First Amendment is that the press bas done nothing to stop the rise of judicial hubris. Who passed the social legislation of the 1950s and 1960s? Not the Congress, but the courts. Who struck down a president? Not Congress or the press. but primarily the courts. And who was leading the cheering as an unrestrained judiciary became the most powerful of the once-equal branches of government? Most of the press, now paying for that poor judgment with its freedom.

At the very root of the U.S. sys-tem of law is the idea that no man shall be his own judge. And yet in the decisions about the extent of judicial power, the judges are their own judges. In this clash, the judici-ary is not a disinterested party.

A New York Times reporter sits in jail today for not telling who helped him expose an admitted failure of our law enforcers. How much is that different from the persecution, nearly two centuries ago, of William Cobbett?

For Nuclear News

August Not All Bad

ROME - Two pieces of good news in one month for the advocates of a nuclear nonproliferation policy is indeed a high score. So high that it would be a pity if August paper-lazy vacationers had

The first is a political announcement: According to Pakistan, France has canceled a contract to provide Pakistan with a plutonium extraction plant. According to French official sources, France is willing to proceed with the project as long as the original design is modified to insure that the installation would not produce weaponsgrade plutonium. From the point of view of nonprofileration policy, the result is equally satisfactory.

The second piece of news — that physicists at Princeton succeeded in their efforts to harness nuclear fusion — is a scientific break-through that has had a compara-tively modest resonance in the international press. Yet the success at Princeton keeps open a tenuous at Princeton keeps open a tenuous thread of hope: The spread of nuclear weapons throughout the world appears now to be less incluctable than many - perhaps too many - responsible people would like to admit.

Good Prospects If mankind is able to control that deadly threat for the next two or three decades, there would seem to be reasonably good prospects that fusion power plants will replace be-fore the end of the century the present variety of atomic reactors that use uranium and plutonium as the spent fuels of those plants cannot be converted into bombs. Thus, a renewed effort against nuclear proliferation may have a precise, limited and more attainable objective: to keep proliferation under control for a couple of decades or

The decision of the French gov ernment to cancel or substantially modify the controversial contract with Pakistan is an important step in that direction. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's move will not be a surprise to those who are ac-quainted with the ideas that the rench head of state has professed in this field during his political career. The announcement comes a mere few weeks after President Carter's decision to authorize an important shipment of enriched uranium to India; a necessary decision, perhaps, but one which does not meet the expectations of many of the president's policy supporters, and which has been approved by Congress against stronger opposi-tion than was originally expected.

Acid Reaction

In fact, and in spite of this month's good news, the prospects for a successful containment of the dissemination of nuclear weapons are not, one must admit, altogether very bright. The pressure of the na-tions that want to go nuclear — i.e. that want to possess an arsenal of atomic weapons — is increasingly

The Pakistanis have reacted acidly to the cancellation of their contract. If they cannot get the plutonium production plant, they may try the black market.

Until recently the mere fact of resorting to such an unorthodox procedure was considered "sinful." The general atmospere has changed to such an extent that now the diversion of a colossal quantity of nuclear materials can be presented to moviegoers as a dazzling exploit.

An Italian-German-Israeli coproduction of "The Plumbat Affair," which concerns the disappearance of 200 tons of uranium, is being shown in Italy and will be released in several countries in September. starring for that exploit an actor who bears a strong political image: Assaf Dayan, the son of the Israeli foreign minister.

A more effective way to undercut the Israeli government's concern for improving relations with its neighbors could scarcely have been

On the European scene, Britain and Germany appear to stand firm on the latest Brazilian deal: Uren-co, an Anglo-German-Dutch com-pany, has signed a contract to enpany, has signed a contract to en-rich Brazil's uranium for its first two German-designed nuclear sta-tions, starting operations in 1981. Enriched uranium may be used to make bombs. But the Brazilians are allergic, as usual, to international safeguards, a sad circumstance that has already prompted President Carter to attempt, without success, to persuade the West Germans to cancel their lucrative and older deal involving eight power stations with that Latin American country. To honor that contract for uranium enrichment without adequate safeguards — a move that the Dutch Parliament has stubbornly opposed — would be an additional blow to the president's nonproliferation policy.

U.S. Reluctant

An additional one, because the recent decision of the British Par-liament to authorize construction of the huge Windscale plutonium plant, has strongly contributed to undermine Carter's campaign to block the spread of nuclear technology that can be used to make hambs. Although the United Carter bombs. Although the United States could limit Britain's plans to serve as a reprocessor for the world (Ja-pan is the best customer and participates in the financing of the plant), Washington has been curiously reluctant to intervene.

Apparently the administration believes that a get-tough attitude might fail or even be damaging. Authorizing the supply of nuclear fuel to India without any serious commitment from that country and compromising with the European allies on enforcement are reasons for genuine concern.

It is alleged by authoritative peo-ple_that nonproliferation policy is not a game in which one can easily score victories and defeats. We believe that in the long list of tests coming up in the near future. President Carter has to achieve, somewhere, a breakthrough. If he does not, his image as the world's most committed and powerful advocate of nonproliferation may be sadly dimmed. And we may be a long time waiting for another leader and for another chance.

Upside-Down Dollar

The editorial entitled: "Europe's High-Risk Challenge" (IHT, July 31) states in its conclusion: "By constructing their fragile dike against the financial seas, the Europeans could thus inadvertently roil the waters." This is most peculiar upside-down reasoning, as if con-tinuing headlong in the way of inflation, as presently shown us by the Washington economic establishment, were to be the only route. Surely their waters are roiling over with unwanted paper dollars which are not backed by gold or other sound financial anchors.

Is it then surprising that with the general lack of confidence in the iollar the European authorities are finally throwing up a dike to provide monetary stability? Surely one last attempt at a proper defense, however fragile initially it may seem, against the oncoming waves of hyper-inflation generated by the nordinate and continuing balanceof-payments deficits, is better than letting the flood deluge us without any form of protest?

PAUL G. HUGENHOLTZ.

Tax Loophole

In the rather extensive correspondence published by the IHT concerning legislation relating to the taxation of Americans abroad now pending before the Congress, I have seen no mention of what could be a major consideration; namely, the cost of administering the legislation as now drafted. Many of the Americans employed abroad have not established bona fide residence — indeed, often do not wish to do so. They have, therefore, been claiming exclusion on the basis of physical presence. I have seen no indication that this basis for exclusion is to be eliminated by the proposed law, except of course for Americans working in Canada or Western Europe. One of the conditions which, until now, has had to be met if one was to claim exclusion on on the basis of physical presence is that one could not spend more than 37 days in the United States during any 18-month period. Presumably. the logic behind this requirement was that it would guard against the establishment of a foreign address simply for tax purposes while the individual was, in fact spending all or most of his time in the United

With the division of the non-U.S. world into two parts of U.S. tax purposes, administration of this aspect of the law would become a costly nightmare. ILO Regret .

About your editorial, "Carter's Present to Meany" (IHT, Aug. 18) I can only express regret that President Carter failed to bring the United States back into the International Labor Organization - one of the world's strongest champions for human rights. As an American in Geneva who attended the ILO's 64th session at the United Nations (as an observer for the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom), I gained some under-standing of the widespread ILO program in its struggle for a world "worthy of man." That my country no longer lends a hand in this endeavor is, to me, incomprehensible.

Bolivia Sense

After so much nonsense written about Bolivia, it was a relief to read the article of Charles A. Krause (IHT, Aug. 4, 1978), who not only has a real knowledge of what is happening in my country but also understands how inaccurate is the policy of the United States, which is actually pushing Bolivia towards a civil war

Most of the people did not want these imposed elections, and we all knew that they would only bring chaos and misery because we were not prepared for them

To help Siles Suazo, who, when president of Bolivia in 1956-1960, violated in all possible ways the human rights with concentration camps, tortures, etc., is to collaborate directly with communism in its way to Latin America.

Democracy is a difficult road for underdeveloped countries, and interference with good intentions but little knowledge does not help.

To find our way — as Mr. Krause points out — first of all we must solve our desperate economic and political problems and try to avoid the tragic steps that marked

Special Banknotes In 1558 Sir Thomas Gresham.

Queen Elisabeth I's financial advisor and founder of the Royal Exhange in London, laid down the economic law which bears his name, and according to which better money always is driven out of monetary circulation by less-valued money (it is easily understood that people would prefer to save coins containing much gold and silver and rather spend coins of some nominal value containing less pre-cious metal). Since banknotes have completely replaced gold and silver to take interest in Gresham's Law. It is, however, surprising that Gresham's Law never in monetary his-tory has been used as a financial instrument by issuing more attractive banknotes than the ordinary ones, with the clear intention of driving them out of circulation. By thus freezing part of people's buy-ing power the state bank could diminish consumers' spending and thereby again contribute to curb inflation. This could easily be done if the state banks would issue a considerable number of special banknotes with the double function of being at the same time legal tender and lottery tickets.

Bonds which instead of bearing normal interest participate in a nationwide lottery are already known in many countries as premiun bonds, which, however, are fairly difficult to subscribe, as apparently the public is reluctant to invest consciously in pure gambling . But most people who would never dream of buying premium bonds would, on the contrary, find it hard to spend a premium banknote which came floating to them. giving them the hope of becoming a millionaire just by saving it. Many countries fight butterly against destructive inflation. Premium banknotes, never used in history, could be a new arm of worldwide importance to subdue one of the causes of inflation. Premium banknotes are also a hitherto unexploited way for governments to raise cheap domestic loans. NIELS WISMER Hellerup, Denmark

Bundesbank Tactics Seen Changing on Dollar Aid

By Fred S. Kempe

FRANKFURT, Aug. 29 (AP-DJ)

— Deutsche Bundesbank has apparently changed its foreign-exchange intervention strategy during the recent attack on the dollar, optimize the strategy of the dollar had continued to deline ing to support the U.S. fund through less visible interbank deal-ings rather than through direct offi-cial purchases at the midday fixing.

It is unclear exactly how many dollars the Bundesbank has bought since the end of July when the dollar again started coming under heavy fire. However, Bundesbank weekly statements indicate that purchases have been at least on a scale equal to intervention in February, when the dollar was first pushed to the 2.00-DM barrier.

Despite that, the Bundesbank has intervened officially at fixing on only two days in August for to-tal purchases of $29.7 million. February's official support at the fixings far exceeded that total at some $450 million with intervention on 14 days.

The Bundesbank's weekly statements show a rise in currency reserves of some 3.1 billion DM thus far in August compared to 2.4 billion DM for February. Many factors other than foreign currency purchases can affect currency reserves, but the Bundesbank said that in both February and August "rate smoothing operations" played a large role in the increases.

Also, massive withdrawals from the "passive" side of the central bank's external balance sheet resulted in an overall reduction in foreign-currency reserves of some 800 million DM in the first week of August despite an inflow of some I billion DM on the active side, where dollar support purchases are

Due to all these factors, observers believe Bundesbank intervention in August must be at least at February's levels, and could likely

"It seems clear that the Bundes bank has changed its strategy," the head of one commercial bank's foreign-exchange department said, "but we aren't completely sure

The central bank has bought dol-lars at the midday fixing, he said, but only by placing orders through banks so that the purchases were more or less secret. A Bundesbank foreign-exchange spokesman refused to comment on either the amount of the purchases or the change of strategy.

"There are pros and cons to secretive support of the dollar," the chief dealer said. "On one hand, if it appears the dollar is firming on its own, people might be more convinced of its basic strength. On the other hand, if the West German central bank intervenes, it shows the world that a powerful institu-tion feels that either the dollar is December.

European central banks apparently offered little resistance to the downward pressure on the dollar following the late afternoon trade announcement. The Bundesbank apparently bought some $20 million, the Bank of Italy absorbed over $35 million and the Bank of England bought under $5 million.

LONDON, Aug. 29 (Reuters) Gold closed at $205 an ounce, more than $5 above the afternoon fix of $199.70, after hectic two-way trading sparked by news of the U.S. trade deficit, dealers said.

After quiet, nervous trading throughout the day, the Washing-ton report caused heavy turnover immediately after the fix. The rapid decline of the dollar aided gold's sharp rise, dealers added.

Brazil Posts Deficit On Trade in Month

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 29 (AP-DJ) — Brazil's trade had a deficit of $79 million in July compared to a surplus of $109.6 million a year earlier, Finance Minister Mario Simonsen said today.

Exports fell to $1.01 billion in July from $1.02 billion a year earlier while imports rose to $1.089 billion from $910 million a year earli-

For the January-July period, the country had a trade deficit of $534.8 million compared to a $352million surplus a year earlier.

Because of Beigium's heavy de-ing the growth of investment, the pendence on foreign trade, it would survey says. Private productive inbe "difficult and probably ineffective" for the country to try to expand on its own in order to boost growth and improve the employment situation, it says.

Given its comparatively favorable price and payments outlook, however, Belgium is especially well placed to take part in the general program of concerted action as agreed by the OECD last June, the survey maintains.

The OECD says that despite some deterioration since 1974, Belgium's balance-of-payments situntion does not pose any problems. Furthermore, the country's current balance is close to equilibrium and its level of foreign indebtedness extremely low.

It points out that the downward pressures exerted on the Belgian franc have been much more the result of the upward movement of other European currencies than of a marked weakening of the under-lying position of the Belgian balance of payments.

Private consumption is set to rise 2.5 percent this year compared with 2.1 percent in 1977, and final domestic demand 2.75 percent, up from 2 percent. Given the uncertainty of demand outlook, and especially the persistence of a high unemployment rate, the savings ratio is likely to be close to the 17.75 percent of last year.

One of the most positive aspects of the Belgian economy is the marked deceleration of inflationary pressures, with the rise in consume prices expected to decline to 4.75 percent this year from 7 percent in 1977, the survey points out.

In contrast, with U.S. inflation at percent and three-month Eurodollar deposits paying 8.5 percent, investors who keep spare cash in dollars are suffering a loss of 2.5

U.S. Farmers Seeking to Balance Bumper Crop With Storage Space

CHICAGO, Aug. 29 (AP-DJ) —

U.S. farmers and the government are seeking to balance the bumper and storage available. About crops expected this year, especially for corn, with limited storage space. How near the balance is struck will have longer-term effects on food prices - and hence inflation - and how much in taxpayers' money goes to farm subsidies.

If space is available, experts say, farmers will be able to spread out their marketings for as long as necessary to maximize the average prices they receive, That, in turn, would encourage hefty production next year and help temper rising consumer food prices; the alternative, a small 1979 crop, would boost prices next year. If space is not available, a glut of grain and soybeans would depress prices despite the existence of fed-

15 billion bushels of new and old crops need to be stored, and that's about the amount of usable space available. Estimates of this year's grain and soybean crops run about 12 billion bushels, which would be added to the more than 3 billion remaining from previous crops.

The Agriculture Department estimates U.S. storage space at 17 bil-lion bushels, of which 2 billion are used only to store unshelled or wet grain that is fed to livestock on the farms where it is stored.

Most forecasters say the big test of whether storage is adequate will come with the corn harvest. Corn is both the nation's largest crop and the last major one to be harvested.

The board said the improvement, the second in a row, "appears to reflect widespread consumer acceptance" of new six-month savings certificates with interest rates linked to those of 26-week treasury bills. The new certificates became available last June 1. The board said that new deposits in July exceeded withdrawals by $2.82 billion, up about 62 percent from the June savings inflow of $1.74 billion. The July total was down 28 percent from the year-earlier savings inflow of $3.91 billion.

The board said the improvement, the second in a row, "appears to reflect widespread consumer acceptance" of new six-month savings certificates with interest rates linked to those of 26-week treasury bills. The new certificates became available last June 1. The board said that new deposits in July exceeded withdrawals by $2.82 billion, up about 62 percent from the June savings inflow of $1.74 billion. The July total was down 28 percent from the year-earlier savings inflow of $3.91 billion. Led by Lord Killanin, the IOC president, the nine-member board is considering a plan, not yet fully made public, to resolve longstanding difficulties over financial re-

The plan is understood to have the city of Los Angeles accept financial responsibility for the games in principle — thus satisfying IOC rules — while the U.S. Olympic Committee pledges to underwrite any losses — thus satisfying Los Angeles taxpayers and politicians.

A Look at How the NFL Season Is Shaping Up

Somehow, the 22-year-old fullback arrived at Barcelona, a club which let it be known they were keen to hire him for $150,000 a year. The snag, however, is that greedy Barcelona already has Johan Neeskens, the dynamic Dutch midfielder, as well as the newly signed Hans Krankl, the Austrian goalscorer. And two foreign players are still the limit in Spanish soccer.

For Better or Worse

Tarantini - or someone on his behalf - had thought of that. He announced that he was married to an actress whose parents are Spanish, thus qualifying to play as a "Spaniard." The Spanish press, however, unearthed the fact that Senor Tarantini's sudden marriage was invalid because his new "wife" is already married. So he tried again, or is trying again, with the aid of a 26-year-old, apparently unmarried, publicity agent who says she wants to marry Tarantini purely as a gesture.

from the style of his predecessor, George Allen. Pardee is expected to start Joe Theismann, 29 years old, rather than Bill Kilmer, 39, at quarterback because Theismann can move behind an insecure line. John Riggins and Mike Thomas will be the running backs, although both have been hurt this summer, and Frank Grant, Danny Buggs

Furthermore, Pardee promises that the special teams will equal those remarkable ones of Allen's regime.

The offensive line, one of the best, has Keith Wortman at guard in place of Conrad Dobler, also traded to the Saints. Jim Hart, the passer, and Mel Gray, the receiver, make the big play better than any other pair.

The defense, which often betrayed the potent offense, has taken on the 3-4 formation, with John Zook leading a newly developed pass rush. But the linebacking is questionable and a rookie, Ken Greene, a first-round draft choice,

Summer Bachelor

NEW YORK — I was thrilled. At last I was a summer bachelor. Tales of these lucky devils and their licentious sportings while the wife was away were part of American lore. Ah, to be affluent! Then can the family be dispatched to the waters for a hot sunburn, while, back in town, the decks are clear for. . .action! Action indeed. Yes. there is action. There is the hed to be made. At the start you think the big problem will be making the bed. Making the bed always has seemed peculiarly Baker odious labor, perhaps because of its military resonances. It was a labor enforced by uncouth sergeants before dawn. Afterward a lieutenant with two years of college would bring his intellect to bear upon your bedmak-ing and, if his silver quarter did not bounce repectfully from the sheets. would deprive you of Saturday

The thought of having to make the bed took the pleasure out of ba-chelorhood before the family had disappeared over the horizon. Then, an inspiration! This, after all. was not the army. The bed could be left unmade,

What's more, this being a double bed, its sheets wouldn't have to be changed for — for who knew how long? You could sleep on one side until the sheets began to feel disagreeable and, then, move over and sleep on the other side for the rest of the summer.

The bednaking problem having been solved, the cooking problem remained. What fun! One spent an hour at the grocery, then spent an hour in the kitchen and — presto!
— one had a splendid meal, which took four minutes to eat. Then came another hour of clearing the table, washing the dishes, scraping pans and blotting grease from stove and kitchen floor. After the first three evenings of this, the fun rapidly oozed out of it. By that time I had performed nine ours of culinary toil in exchange for 12 minutes of eating. Moreover, after the three hours of nightly labor, one's energy was too drained to support an evening of adventure on the town.

The New York City newspaper strike continues. This is a rerun of a column that appeared in July, 1977.

I took to spending evenings at home eating prodigious quantities of fruit, which never seemed to be ripe enough. In college nobody teaches you how to recognize a ripe peach. For a while, I fried eggs in the middle of the night, dreading the inevitable heart attack. The alternatives, such as eating beans out of a can with a spoon. cut the labor satisfactorily, but did nothing to create the high spirits necessary to pursue the bachelor pleasures. After a dinner of beans spooned out of a can, I noted, my spirit was up to nothing more than a listless five-hour sprawl in front of the television set.

The worst part, however, was the absence of talk, it is amazing how much of marriage is devoted to conversation. And now there was nobody to talk to. Nobody in the kitchen, nobody in the parlor, nobody in the holder of the holder of the holder. body in the bedroom. Nobody to say, "What a day!" to. Or. "Let's watch television." Or. "Do you think it's going to rain?" Or. "My God! I can't believe these bills."

At first, I would say things like "Let's watch television" to myself, and myself said, "I don't feel like it." I almost retorted, "Well, you can sit there and read Cosmopolitan if you want to, but I'm going to watch televison," but I didn't. I got a grip on myself instead.

Within 10 days I had scarcely any hair left to cut. I switched to cutting fingernails. Then toenails. The house was quiet except for the snip-snip-snip of scissors. One evening, a woman of a certain reputation telephoned and suggested a rendezvous, but with my hair and nails so severely cut she would certainly, I knew, laugh at me. Cruelly. I declined. I had forgotten how to talk, anyhow.

Now I must stop. It is time to eat some unripe cantaloupe. Afterward, I shall cut the sleeves off some shirts.

If all else fails, a mime can go out onto the street, do his routine and pass the hat. A lot of mimes do that. It's more than, say, an unemployed engineer can do.

From Laryngitis to a Career as a Mime

By Jeffrey Robinson

ANNES (IHT) — In 1951, a young actor - named Richmond Shepard found himself suffering from laryngitis a definite setback when you're trying to play Othello or Hamlet. He couldn't talk, so he did the next best thing, and ever since that day he has made a living by not talking. Richmond Shepard is one of America's most acclaimed

"Mime is still not yet well understood in the States," he says. "It's a very ancient art, the basis of all Hindu and Japanese theater. and can easily be traced through the Greek and Roman theaters into the commedia dell'arte and France Unfortunately, in America, the general reaction to mime has for many years been, it's too quiet."

Seventeen years ago Shepard created a professional mime troupe, acting out A.A. Milne's poems for children. Since then, he has appeared on television, done half a dozen films, any number of TV commercials and earned himself three New York theater awards. He has also written "Mime — The Technique of Silence," which is regarded as a textbook on the subject. His second book, recently finished, is "Creating Comedy Through Theater Games and Improvisa-

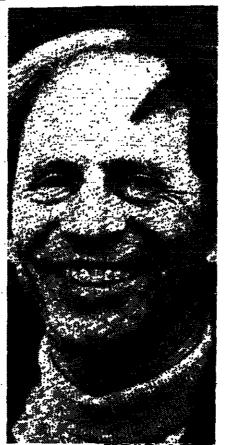

Athletic Ability

"A good part of mime is, of course, acting. But you also need athletic ability and the desire to show off. You have to be able to look silly in front of other people. It's sort of like being a nonverbal politician."

Only a handful of people in the United States actually make a living as mimes. "It's tough because there are so few parts written for mimes. I do theater and television work, and that keeps me busy. If all else fails, a mime can always go out onto the street, do his routine and pass the hat. A lot of mimes do that. It's more than, say, an unemployed engineer can do. Can't you just see him on a corner asking everyone who goes by if they'd like him to build a bridge?"

Understandably, it takes years of practice to learn standard mime, techniques. The image most people seem to have of mimes is Marcel Marceau walking into a windy room. Proving that mime is more, each year Shepard, now on vacation in the south of France, puts together a new two-hour show for his Los Angeles-based troupe.

Richmond Sbepard.

"We tell very complicated stories in nume. We create images, magic, build entire worlds through movement and expression. No, mime is not one guy pretending to chase butterflies. It's very complex situa-tions where not a single word is spoken and where everything that happens is perfectly

For instance, one of his better-known routines takes 10 members of his troupe and turns them into an automobile . . . each actor playing a different part of the car. They roll along until one of the tires . . . a tire played by a mime . . . goes flat and needs to be changed.

"It's funny, amusing, entertaining, and I'd like to think, very clever theater. It's costum-ing, makeup, lights, music, plot and charac-ter interaction. Costuming and makeup are especially complex."

Dressing for the Part

Even in simple sketches a great deal of time must be spent on dressing for the part. "Makeup and costumes take a lot of time, so before a show I often have to get ready at home. My four daughters all think it's perfectly normal for daddy to put on a funny suit, white makeup and lipstick when he drives off to work I live in a middle-class tract house in suburbia and my neighbors actually accept my guise of a work costume the same way they do a gray suit and an attache case for anyone else."

Off stage and out of costume, Richmond Shepard's neighbors also accept one of his zanier habits, that of wearing different colored socks. One red sock and one blue sock Why? He answers, "Nowhere is it written in the ancient scrolls, thou shall wear the same color socks. Anyway, I've got another pair just like this one at home."

Despite costuming and makeup on stage, and people who don't know about his socks. he is frequently recognized off stage. "People who have seen me work will many weeks later come up and say hello. When I say hello back to them they look shocked as if to think, hey this guy can talk. But the thing that fascinated me for a very long time, more than that reaction, was the fact that people did indeed recognize me. It's not as if I look like myself on stage, because I work in makeup. What I've come to understand is that they recognize my eyes. Eyes are a very important part of mime and whether I'm in costume or not, my eyes are always the same. Interesting, no?"

Then again, there are times when he wants to be recognized, in particular by people he has never met. "I travel a lot, doing shows, and there's always someone to fetch me at the airport. Naturally, I'm not in cos-tume, not on a plane. I'm afraid that would freak-out too many people. So when there is someone to pick me up and they ask on the phone what I look like, I describe myself very accurately with five words. It always works. It's never failed. All I have to tell

The 1984 Olympic Games won't be held in Spiveys Corner, N.C., after all. A letter described the Olympic Committee's regrets that Spiveys Corner, population 50, couldn't be considered as a site for the games because the complicated applications had to be turned in by August, 1977, and Spiveys Corner only started to apply in June of this year. No — in the ad the Scott Paper Co. is running in business publications. It mentions no names — neither Columbo's nor that of his alter ego, actor Peter Falk. There's a new U.S. legal doctrine that famous per-sonages must know what they are talking about when they endorse products. But a paper company spokesman said that Falk is just "an identifier," not a pitchman, so he doesn't have to know his roll firsthand.

There are certain rewards that go with being a movie hairdresser, even if the job does require getting up at 4 o'clock in the morning. Miss Tomlin's tip was more tangible: A week at The Golden Door, a weight-reducing resort favored by overweight Hollywood types. That cost Miss Tomlin $1,575. It cost Miss Della five pounds.
